WHO IS GUILTY?

"The man waits outside," said Mr. Spen cer Fenton's servant, as he stepped in front of the low office table, piled with books and law papers. Mr. Fenton's servan; was a man of penetration, and knew where to draw the dividing line between the common place "man" and the higher order of being known as the gentleman. "Let him come in," said Mr. Fenton.

quietly, as he took a pistol from a drawer, laid it on the table and dropped a newspaper over it.

Mr. Fenton was a lawyer, in good practice in a large city, and was known as widely among the class of customers for whom he practiced as a celebrated lawyer of "Great Expectation" and fame.

The man was admitted, and proved a sullen looking, brutish personage, in a suit of slops, which looked as if they had been sodden in the ooze and slime of the river for months. He held in both bands-as if he feared that if it was not held tightly it name by the servant who answered the would elude his grasp and escape a man- cail. gy fur cap without a frontpiece, and with one ragged "ear-lap" hanging by a single

Mr. Fenton looked once at this squarejawed, savage face, and gauged his man. "You may go, John," he said to his servant. "Take these papers down to Mr. Frisbee, at No. , old city hall, and wait for a message. Take an hour or two for yourself, if you like."

John went out, and Mr. Fenton turned the key in the lock and put it in Who had poisoned her mind against him, his pocket, while the man watched him and how should he unravel the dark web furtively. The lawyer then took a seat at the table opposite his client, looking at him sternly.

"Now, my man," he said quietly, "we are together, and I want to know exactly how this matter stands." "I'm going to tell you how it stands.

I can get er to keep the other cab in sight, they along without you - understand that!"

I'll play fair, Mr. Fenton. Lord love you, the idea or trying to pull wool over the houses were of the class known as your eyes never came into my head," Very well. Now, as to this bank rob bery. You say that you can give information-for a consideration, of course.'

But Seth Amity! knowing the weakness of human nature as I do, and having been witness to all sorts of duplicity, I would yet undertake to swear that you are lying." 41 ain't, Mr. Fenton; so help me, I ain't conversing in low tones. "Course I know about it. I ain't snak ed and crawled there bull nights for nothin'. See here, they are going to make another haul on the bank, and they are going to meet to arrange it to night. Would you dare to go with me and listen?"

"Can you lead the way?"
"I kin, and you'll see what yer precious Seth Amity amounts to."

Fenton had armed himself, and after a

"You have got the office." "Tom keeps a little game of fare, and a good many rough customers hang around im," said the policeman.

"Of course," said Fenton quietly. "You are game," muttered the policenan. "This way then."

He opened a gate in a board fence beween two houses and passed in, and by the talismanic power of certain words and knocks they were soon inside of the houses, in which the gambling was in full blast.

The proprietor and Senter exchanged a few words, and then Senter led the way up stairs to a small room which was carpeted so thickly that their footsteps gave no sound. Senter moved a small panel, the opening and saw three men seated at a table, almost within reach of his hand, the third by name, at different times, and the name was Soth Amity.

Fenton distened and heard the whole plan of the proposed robbery, and he knew that the man to whom he had trusted, and to whom he had been about to give his daughter in marriage, was a villain and a partner with robbers.

All compunction, were at an end, and the last words he heard as the men arose were these:

"I have invested the proceeds of our last haul in Chiesge is such a way that it will give me induence enough with that old "What time will you come?"

He went through the late war on the Southern side; was at Vicksburg, all through the seige, and in a dozen others. What were at that time supposed to be impregnable strongholds, and he says he never saw anything like it. These lava rocks, he says, are filled up in a way that no engineer could plan out. The Indians use them as real forts, getting behind them and shooting through the cracks the same as through a casemate. Their position cannot be charged because some of them are 100 feet in height and utterly inaccessible from below. Neither can they be shelled, for shells would strike against these rocks like boiled turnips avainst a tombstone. Mr. Fairchild says shore are two ways of getting at these Indians. One is to charge on them with a scarcely an inch across, and motioned to six-lives out of every ten. The other is to the opening and saw three men scated at surround and starve them out. The one plan will cost an ocean of blood, the other a mint of money. The latter plan is almost impossible to carry out for the reason that supplies cannot be brought into the lava bed, and any cordon that is drawn around Jack must be located right in the rocks. As it was the other, the wounded rocks. As it was the other, the wounded had to be packed out on horseback for miles. Nothing in the form of a wagon could be brought within ten miles of where the troops fought. Again Jack has been cattle by the hundred in his camp, with plenty of grass on the lake shore to feed them on. Months would have to chapse before he would even feel the necessity of supplies, and by that time our side would feel as thred of the starcing out process as the only feasible plan, then, is to

In this issue will be found the Mechanice' and Laborer's Lien Law, as passed by the Legislature, which is a very important law. In commenting on this law, the Battleboro Advance says: "It will be seen that the land is bound for the laborer's pay, whether the real owner of the land hires him or not, and the lien is not limited to the improvements. Seasonable Hints.

The unfavorable state of the weather. during the winter, np to this time, has very much retarded farming operations. When the winter breaks and spring opens, no time should be lost to make extensive preparations for large crops, as, from all accounts, the demand for grain will be great. We clip from an exchange the following in relation to

BREADSTUFFS.

The prospects of the grain crop next summer are particularly interesting to the planters of the South, and, indeed, to the farmers of the country at large. It is highly probable that there will be an unusual demand for breadstuffs. The London Times states, on the authority of the ablest grain statistician of England, that there will be a great falling off in the grain crop throughout the United Kingdom next summer, owing to the unfavorable weather which has prevailed, and England will be a heavy buyer of the breadstaffs. On the heels of the bad season comes the prospect of a bloody war between England and Russia, which will make her need of foreign souplies of providers. ble weather which has prevailed, and Bogneed of foreign supplies of provisions greater than ever. In this country the inusual severity of the present winter has probably destroyed a great deal of the grain sown, and the deficiency will have to be made good in part by spring wheat. The planters of the South can draw their own inferences from the faces the market. It would seem that they would find greater profit in sowing spring wheat freely instead of devoting their attention almost exclusively to cotton,

HORRIBLE-A COUPLE OF DEAD INVANTS DEVOURED BY Dogs.—A couple of twin in a grove about three miles from Company Shops, dead. The coroner held inquest and they were taken to the house of Dr. A. G. Moore of Company Shope for a part mortan examination. He examined them and taking out their lungs he discovered that they had never breathed. They were nailed up in a box and the box set out in Dr. Moore's yard, and he sent for the coroner to bave them buried. The coroner had "sent a man," it seems, to have it done, but night coming on, and the box still out there, docter Moore fearing lest the hogs might get to it, the smell of the decaying flesh being very disagreeable, he put the box away in his office out in the yard, and though the door of the office was not very secure, he thought as the box was nailed that it would be all safe in there. But that night about 20 dogs from the town surrounded the office and breaking in they tore out the box, and the next morning not a vestige of the infaute could be found equal to any put up at the North, and our save the atomach of one. The box could not have been very accurely nailed, and the dogs had eaten them up.-Era.

HUY YOUR CHUN

Oh me! those joyous days are gone!
I little dreamt, till they were flown,
How fleeting were the hours!
For, lest he break the pleasing spell,
Time bears for youth a muffled bell,
And-hides his face in flowered.

wall I mind me of the days Still bright in memory's flattering rays,
When all was fair and new;
When knaves were only found in books,
And friends were known by friendly looks,
And love was always true!

While yet of sin I scarcely dreamed, And everything was what it seemed, And all too bright for choice: When fays were wont to guard my sleep,
And Cruse still could make me weep,
And Santa Claus, rejoice!

When Heaven was pictured to my thought
(In spite of all my mother taught
Of happiness serene)
A theatre of boyish plays—
One glorious round of holidays,
Without a school between!

Ah me! those joyous days are gone,
I little dreamt, till they were flown,
How fleeting were the hours!
For, lest he break the pleasing spell,
Time bears for youth a muffled bell,
And hides his face in flowers!

The Ram that Butted.

The Danbury (Ot.) News gets off the following good thing: "A retired clergyman sends as an account of a little affair that happened in this place. It appears that there was a young woman, a fine spirited girl, engaged at a washtub opposite an open door. Just behind was a young man, as is generally the case, and in the yard was an old buck that was allowed the freedom of the premises, which is not always the case, as we are glad to say. Well, this buck came up to the door, and looked in, and the young man going close behind the young woman, pointed his finger straight at the buck, and the old fellow recognizing at once the pressing character or this mute invitation, put down his head and dashed forward, and the miss head and dashed forward, and the miss head and dashed forward.

and the miserable fellow stepped to one side and fled, and the young woman all unconscious of the arrangement, received If you want to buy your goods cheap, the awful shock without warning, and passed over the tub, and the air for an instant appeared to be full of slippers, and wet clothes, and soap, and hot water, and And the next minute that goat came flying out of that door at a dreadful speed, bald the whole length of his spine, and with a wild look in his eye, back of the barn scratching his chin, and trying to recall all the circumstances in the unfortunate affair."

Mr. Jenes, one evening in fly time, hav-ing been provokingly lashed in the face, tied the tail of the cow he was milking very securely to his boot-strap. Every Mr. Jones congratulated himself on the

A recent German paper containing a witty reply from a clergyman who was traveling, and who stopped at a hotel much frequented by what are termed in commercial parlance, "drummers."

The host, not being used to have clergymen at his table, looked at him with surprise; the clerks used all their artillery of wit upon him, without cliciting a remark in self-defence. The worthy clergyman ate his dinner quietly, apparently without observing the gibes and sheers of his neigh-

The editor of the Lancaster, Pa., Repress tells this story, but he never writes under an oath: "A wife of nearly ten years, having given her servant a holiday, was attending to the culinary matters herself, and hearing her husband coming into the kitchen thought she would surprise him as soon as he entered the door by throwing her hands over his eyes and imprinting a kiss on his brow, as in the days of honeymoon, the husband returned the salute with interest, and said as he disengaged her interest, and said as he disengaged her hand, "Mary, my darling, where is your mistress?" The wife discharged "Mary darling" the next day, and has adopted a new plan for surprising her hashand."

In Jefferson county, Wis., lives a worthy German, who some years ago, was presented by his wife with a son. Hans said:

"Katrine, das ish goot; I trinks five glass peer on dat." A year or two after his wife presented him with a bouncing pair of twins. "Vell," said Hans, "dat vas petter as der oder dime, I trinks more as ten glass peer on dat." But the next time the good woman gave bith to triplets, and that made "him shooke mit his meint just a title. Mein Gott, Katrine, vat is the matter on you?
